PUBLISHES BOOK . . . Dr. Robert W. Kirk, English and music instructor at El Camino College, has climaxed a career of 15 years at the college with the publication of a new book, "Faulkner's People." Dr. Kirk was recently presented a 15-year pin for his service at El Camino. His book will be published by the University of California Press.

El Camino Professor Publishes New Book

Publication of the book "Faulkner's People" by Dr. Robert W. Kirk, professor of English at El Camino College, has been announced by the University of California Press. The new book is a complete guide and index to the characters in William Faulkner's fiction. William Hogan, THE HERALD'S book reviewer, has suggested the work on the Nobel Prize winner's characters may turn out to be "a surprise best-seller." An Oct. 18 publication date has been set by the University of California Press. Printing costs for the 818-page volume were met through the cooperation of the Ford Foundation and a selling price of $5.95 has been set.

Kirk, with Marvin Klotz, San Fernando State College English professor, has put into the book identities and interrelations of approximately 1,200 named characters from Faulkner's novels, short stories and sketches. Hogan says that there is little doubt that all serious readers of Faulkner will keep the book on home library shelves, but that the book will also serve general readers as a guide and entertaining information piece. "The book is not just a list of names," Kirk said. "We have tried to make it readable for itself and we hope that time will prove us right."

PART I of the book presents Faulkner's novels in order of their publication and under each title the characters are named with concise characterizations and notations of pages upon which the character's name occurs. This scheme is repeated in Part II for the characters in the short stories and sketches. Genealogical charts of the Sartoris, Burden and McCaslin-Edmonds-Beauchamp families, as well as a map of Yoknapatawpa County are provided. Kirk spent five years writing the book, which grew from his doctoral dissertation at the University of Southern California.

"PERHAPS THE book was begun the day I was born in Amory, Mississippi, because Amory is only 17 miles from Faulkner's home in Oxford, Miss.," Kirk said. It was Kirk's interest in his native south that led him to read Faulkner and it was in Faulkner that he found the "rhythms of the country, the land and the people that I could remember." "Faulkner's writings deal with the life and problems of the south; they reflect the times and location of a people but are universal in their application to all people," Kirk said.

KIRK AGREES with John Dos Passos' remark made after the death of Faulkner. "He wrote of the truth of the stirring of the flesh and the blood and the passion of real men observed tenderly and amusedly and frightenedly." The death of live music in the theater is another event that led to Kirk's book. As a youth his ambition was to be a theater musician. His instrument was the trombone, and he recalls working for a time with
